Dear Professor Izumi,

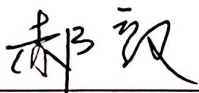

I am pleased to write in support of Jietong Li's application to your graduate program. As a senior expert at ICBC Headquarters, I have had the opportunity to observe Ms. Li's growth and contributions, and I am confident she would be a valuable member of your research team.

Through her active involvement in several innovation projects, I have worked closely with Ms. Li and witnessed her capabilities firsthand. Notably, in an anti-money laundering initiative, she independently explored unsupervised anomaly detection methods rather than waiting for the compliance department to complete due diligence and provide solid labels. Her initiative not only advanced our project but also introduced valuable methodologies to our team. This experience highlighted her adaptability, self-motivation, and strong sense of project responsibility.

Ms. Li's analytical skills span a variety of business domains, including payment settlements, agency sales, and precision marketing. In every area, she proactively seeks out academic research and technical insights, regularly sharing findings with colleagues. Her expertise was instrumental in developing three patents submitted to the China National Intellectual Property Administration. Additionally, Ms. Li often leads knowledge-sharing sessions on topics such as payment systems, data analysis, and multi-agent systems, always presenting with clarity and depth. Her dedication to continuous learning and collaboration makes her an excellent fit for research-oriented environments.

In summary, I highly recommend Jietong Li for your graduate program. Her professionalism, initiative, and collaborative spirit convince me that she will make meaningful contributions to your laboratory under your guidance.

Kind regards,

Yi Hao
